North America

Meet the Treeing Cur-

The Treeing Cur originated in the Midwest United States, for the purpose of keeping a farmer's herd together and away from wild cattle. They were also frontier dogs, and were essential to family survival at the time. They are formally hunting dogs for small game, such as squirrels and raccoons. The Treeing Cur have no distinct colors or markings. Treeing curs are agile and quick, and often work in rough terrain. They have floppy ears and their coats are short and dense.

There are eight other breeds of cur!

The Treeing Cur originated the phrase "barking up the wrong tree". When treeing curs would think the animal that they were tracking was in a tree, they would bark. When the animal had fled the tree for another, the dogs were "barking up the wrong tree".

Treeing Curs typically weigh anywhere from 30-60 pounds and they can grow up to about 26 inches tall. It is said that Treeing curs have "cat-like" feet

Meet the Boston Terrier-

Boston terriers come from a cross with a now-extinct dog and a bulldog from the 1860s. They are named after Boston, Massachusetts and are the official dog of the state of Massachusetts!

Boston Terriers can grow to be 17 inches tall and on average, weigh from 12-25 pounds. Boston terrier colors often look like a tuxedo! They are black and white and they have a square head, big eyes, and tall ears!

Originally used to hunt for mice in clothes factories, Boston terriers are now for companionship they even have the nickname “The American Gentleman”.

Fun Fact: Boston terriers hold the world record for largest eyes on a dog

Fun Fact: Former President Gerald Ford took his two Boston terriers to live with him in the white house!

North America

Meet the Carolina Dog-

Carolina dogs originated from the early canines that crossed the Bering Sea land bridge with early Americans. These dogs have a pack mentality, and usually enjoy the company of other dogs or humans.

An average Carolina dog weight is 30-55 pounds and they can grow up to 20 inches on average. Carolina dogs have pointed ears and fox-shaped faces along with fish hooked tails. Carolina dogs often groom themselves by licking their coats, similar to a cat! Carolina dogs look similar to coyotes and dingos.

This breed was recognized by the American kennel club in the 1970s.
